ADVANCE SHEET

OF THE

Louisiana Sugar and Rice Report!

One year attests our progress. The interval has been fruitful of incident, and I call a halt on the verge of my new Book to await its prologue, as before. Just one year ago competition sprang, full armed, from a hedge on the highway, and I propose to examine its fruits to-day. I measure forces with my adversary and turn over my prophecies to my readers as facts accomplished. All I foretold is made true. The competitive work is established at $3. Its cost is beyond comparison in excess of such sum. On my side I find renumeration in such price. But the rival Sugar Book lacks all my facilities; it lacks my intimacy with the subject, my experience in its history. It is a blind guide, and its readers are as lost babes in a wood.

In the majority of instances my data have been furnished on my personal application, and are the fruits of individual research. When otherwise the deviation from such method is not wide; only experts, long familiar with such labors, act for me. I have traversed nearly all the Parishes, stood face to face with producers in their fields and homes. On the spot I have revised my tables, and made doubly safe the figures on which my work stands.

It is for these reasons I would carry to their legitimate results the predictions on which my future reposes. The sugar books are before our people, each to answer for itself. But minds, by the hundred, interested in these statistics, require the straight deal as to facts, and would see errors and inaccuracies held to answer, as these below:

In the Price Current Annual Statement, quotations are made from my Book in repeated instances. Can its own be held as authority while such fact happily relieves the Annual Statement of the responsibility of propagating the errors and inaccuracies of its own book? No less than 20,000 barrels constitute the deviation from a straight estimate of the rice crop. It is found correctly given in the Price Current Annual Statement from my book, thus: 170,000 barrels; while the total furnished by the Price Current Sugar Book, page 76, is 190,408 barrels. There can be no excuse for lines of difference so wide as these, if figures are to be held as comprehending facts. One of the devious uncertainties, peculiar to the Price Current Sugar Book, is that relating to the grades of sugar. Thus: in many instances certain planters are quoted as making clarified sugars, who have never made a pound of such, while others, who have made nothing else, are quoted, in large totals, as producing brown sugars only.

My labors, preparatory to submitting my ensuing work, are near completion, the book being in press.

I take leave here to thank my friends, of both city and country, for that unremitting support and encouragement, which alone can give success to effort or value to the products of labor and skill.

LOUIS BOUCHEREAU.

INTRODUCTION--EXPLANATORY.

It is nine years since my first "Louisiana Sugar Report"—this is my ninth publication. With what fidelity I have pursued this difficult business many can judge, for I am to-day surrounded by numerous friends who began with me; but not even they know the difficulties which a true appreciation of his responsibilities imposes on one pursuing this peculiar calling; no one can tell what longings to lay down its burdens, overtake day after day, the tired pilgrim in the parishes of our State engaged in this work; none can guess how often I have myself faltered on my way, and only rallied when actual necessity has "pricked the sides of my intent," barren, as I was, of any expedient for "dodging."

This year there has been added to the ordinary worrying and wearing cares and perplexities, that worse one than any or all, sickness, which, although not wholly disabled by it, has rendered my work more than usually trying, and what is more important, has caused the unfortunate delay in the appearance of my book. It is such fact impels me to speak to my generous patrons this word of explanatory introduction. And while doing so I will couple with it my grateful acknowledgements for many kind favors incident to my impaired physical condition, courtesies with which I could not have dispensed, but which are yet even more valuable as kindnesses than as aids. To all helpers I give thanks, for they have made my annual task a cheerful one under difficult circumstances and have enabled me to bring my acknowledgments to them in this form.

As to the book I trust its authentic and verified information will be found of use to our planters and merchants. It contains facts that are true and reliable, and not a word or figure inserted because rendered expedient by the absence of the true and reliable one. In its order the parishes will be found put down as they were traveled, commencing at their most northern point. I have registered all plantations preparing to make sugar for the first time, and also those which made sugar in 1861, placing them in the rotation in which they came as I passed from one to another; so also with the stores, giving their locations and postoffices—thus making not only a perfect directory but a perfect guide to travellers.

LOUIS BOUCHEREAU.

WEATHER AND CROPS.

JANUARY, 1876.—As had not been expected the weather this month, in the southern and south-western parishes, was mild, pleasant and favorable for field work. The occasional rains, with thunder and lightning, started the fall planting and stubbles, sprouting them out liberally. The seed cane had sprouted in the mats and wind-rows, but was otherwise healthy, and needed but care in handling. The "breaking up" of the ground and planting commenced earlier than usual in these parishes under earlier contracts with the hands. Not so in the northern and north-western parishes. The weather was wet and disagreeable, and, although propitious to the growth of the plant was not so for field work, which did not commence till the latter part of the month.

FEBRUARY—Opened with a heavy rain, followed by sudden cold, causing ice on the 2nd. No injury, however, ensued, as the ground had been well warmed by mild weather, which again followed with more rain. On the 21st a very heavy rain continued 12 hours, which stopped work and delayed planting. Altogether the weather turned out favorable for February, with more rain and frosts than we wanted, but none to justify the prevailing apprehensions of planters that the seed cane and stubble would suffer injury. These remained sound and healthy, and planting went on satisfactorily with good prospects.

The river came up to the levees, but caused no fear of overflow, the Morganza and Bonnet-Carre crevasses having made safe the section of country below them. Some planters, however, had to guard against the encroachment of the crevass waters by making their back levees.

MARCH—A heavy fall of rain, with strong wind from the southeast, began on the 5th (Sunday) and next day, increased to a furious storm, lasting all day, and threatening the destruction of levees at many points, and causing much damage to property.

In Plaquemines planters were kept busy closing small breaks and strengthening weak places in their levees, but escaped more considerable injury. In Vermilion lightning set fire to the corn-house of Mr. Neville Vincent, which, with the corn it contained, was consumed. In Assumption the upper portion of the fine residence of Mr. A. Tete was demolished and his stables and several cabins blown down. Also, cabins on the Trial Plantation; and also sugar-house and cabins on Mr. Mailhot's. On Bayou Bœuf several sugar-houses and other buildings were blown down, besides sheds, fences, trees, etc. When favorable weather ensued planters were kept busy digging stubbles and planting cane and corn. The stubble, and fall planted, as well as early planted, cane were coming up superbly, and had in many places grown to a perfect stand when, on the 15th and 18th, we had frosts which turned the plant slightly yellow. A hard, cold rain followed on the 20th. Next day a heavy freeze cut the plants to the ground, but the injury resulted in only retarding the crops fully six weeks. The weather to the end of the month was unpropitious; heavy rains obstructed field work and left the ground beaten hard.

APRIL—Came on the scene with splendid weather. Planters hastened to finish planting corn and cane and bar-off and dig stubbles. On the 6th and 7th came heavy rains, with the wind east; and again on the 13th and 14th, packing the ground hard, stopping field work, and rotting all the newly-planted corn; the rest of the month dry weather and cloddy ground; plant ers wishing rain again. During April several crevasses occurred in Lafourche; one only was closed; the others were at points where but small parcels of land were under cultivation.

MAY—Came in with rain (on the 2nd), mostly in the northwestern and northern parishes, a cool north wind following. On the same day a crevass occurred in Lafourche on the Beauvais plantation, which some futile efforts were made to stop; and which destroyed many crops, and did injury to many others in the lower portion of the parish. Planters made good progress with fair weather, and the crops, though backward, looked well. Fine and beneficial rains fell on the 8th, and again on the 20th and 21st, the month closing favorably.

JUNE—There were rains during June which were partial to the western and southwestern parishes, the northern and the river parishes suffering with drought. This, however, was relieved by extra cultivation given to the plant. It enabled planters to lay by the larger part of their cane crop.

JULY—During this month light showers of rain were more frequent, favoring some localities over others. The ground was dry and readily absorbed it, falling, as it did, slowly. The cane crop was well laid by early in the month. Toward its end there was no rains, yet the cane kept green and healthy.

AUGUST—Light but general rains fell on the 4th, 8th and 18th, and did great good to the cane crop; and during the month there were light, partial showers, not sufficient to saturate the ground.

SEPTEMBER—Opened and continued dry, with exceptional light showers in some parishes. The cane, however, grew well, keeping a green appearance. During the latter part of the month the nights were cool and pleasant.

OCTOBER—The weather was very dry, with cool nights, which checked vegetation and sweetened the cane. It had rarely been known so sweet, and its yield so satisfactory, thus early. The auspices for commencing sugar making were favorable, the planters lacking only water in their ponds. Hence a very large crop was anticipated.

NOVEMBER—Cool and pleasant, with a dry, cold snap on the 7th and 8th, which killed the bud of the cane and compelled prudent planters to wind-row. The estimates of the crop now went as high as 200,000 hogsheads. But continued dry weather led many to stop grinding, while others hauled water. The promising prospects of the season were soon greatly impaired by the severe freezes of November 30th, and December 1st, 2nd, 3d and 4th, when Farenheit ranged from 19 to 24 degrees. It proved a death blow to the large quantity of cane standing, and injured the crop greatly, both as to quantity and quality of both sugar and molasses. We estimate the loss so caused at not less than 15,000 hogsheads of sugar.

DECEMBER—The weather continued cold, wet and unfavorable for work up to the 10th, when it became more suitable for sugar making. The canes, which had been wind-rowed after the frosts of November 7th and 8th, and were ground at the last of the season, gave a very satisfactory result.

In respect to the growing crop we may remark that a large quantity of seed cane was put down which kept healthy, notwithstanding the damp and cold weather, excepting on a few plantations, where it was mostly lost. There was, hence, an increased acreage planted. But the stubbles are defective. It may be remarked that the first year's stubbles are better in some localities than in others, but not of a full stand; second and third year stubbles are worthless. The plant throughout the State is of a full stand, with indications of health and strong vegetation. The general outlook for the crop, at present, is not so promising and satisfactory as we would like to declare it.

RICE.

In anticipation of a mild season many rice fields, in every section of the country, were planted late in February or early in March. The plant being cut down by the cold snap of March 21st, these fields were replanted. The acreage in rice last year was larger than ever before, and, with good auspices, a much larger crop might have been reasonably anticipated. But the result shows but a slight increase over that of the previous year. This was owing to the prevalence of water grass on many of the rice lands, which were not properly cleaned. Just when irrigation was most necessary the waters of the rivers and bayous, on which dependence was placed, were very low; it rose later but not sufficiently to irrigate the higher grounds. This, combined with the draught of July and August, prevented the filling of the grain.

The prospects of the growing crop are not favorable for a large yield. There was less planted than last year, while the season has been so inauspicious as to cause replanting in some instances twice or three times; these are the present signs. We trust they may abate as the season advances and that results may disappoint our fears.

Our readers may rely implicitly on the accuracy of our weather notes, in preparing which memory has had no hand, nor conjecture afforded its wonted help. All are authentic, having been prepared week by week as the season advanced, with a view to the same certainty and precision by which we have been equally careful to characterize our data and their summaries throughout this book. We propose to furnish in our Annual Sugar and Rice Report an authority in the field of statistics, and at the same time to use such knowledge and experience as we possess, for the promotion of all the interests that belong to these great and growing industries in Louisiana.

MARKETS.

SUGAR.

SEPTEMBER—The demand during this month was firm and prices fair, the stock at its begining being about 1200 hhds., and at its close about 400. We have no data of receipts this month; exports 564 hhds.

OCTOBER—The market opened with a small stock, prices firm. Some new open kettle sugar was received on the 7th and sold for 10⅝@11⅛; also some new first clarified, from St. Emma Plantation, sold at 11½. Prices and demand continued fair until the 25th, when the market became irregular, prices falling 1 cent, the month closed with a further depressed market and lower prices, brown being in better demand than clarified. Receipts during the month 3106 hhds.; exports 744 hhds.

NOVEMBER—The low prices at the close of October having attracted the attention of buyers, and orders being large, the demand for browns improved and prices advanced ½ cent. Later, however, receipts became larger, and buyers held back for lower prices, holders yielding ¼ cent, when the market again became very active and prices went up ¾ cent on open kettle. and ⅝ cent on clarified. The large receipts which followed again caused depression and a decline in prices of ¾ cent, the month closing with only a fair demand and stock large. Receipts this month 31,403 hhds.; exports 15,868 hhds, DECEMBER—Prices rating lower than in other markets the demand became active and receipts were sold with no loss of time. Later advices from New York weakened prices and the market became inactive. Demand afterward improved, especially for lower grades, the month closing with an active market and an advance of ½ cent on kettle sugars, clarified not moving from previous prices. Receipts 40,216 hhds.; exports 27,551 hhds.

JANUARY, 1877—Opened and continued with demand animated, small supplies coming in to the 25th, when a decline of ⅛ to ¼ cent was noted on kettle sugar, the month closing with good demand and strong prices. Receipts 25,612 hhds.; exports 19,870 hhds.

FEBRUARY—This month came in with an active demand, prices remaining strong and supplies selling freely. Supplies being smaller, prices were maintained with an upward tendency. 22nd—demand slackened, buyers holding off, causing a decline of ⅛ to ¼ cent on the better grades, the month closing with an improved feeling and prices unchanged. Receipts 19,881 hhds.; exports 10,948 hhds.

MARCH—Market moderately active, with a scarcity of the better grades. Receipts being small, the demand becomes better, prices strong, with an advance of ⅛ to ¼ cent on open kettle sugar. 20th—the demand moderated, with decline in prices, the month closing with moderate demand and prices irregular. Supplies offering but refused, buyers expecting a decline. Receipts 9099 hhds.; exports 3245 hhds.

APRIL—Demand continued active without change to the 18th, when there was an advance of ¼ cent, owing to scant supplies. Market continued to rule in favor of sellers, with a further advance of ¼ to ½ cent about the 24th, the month closing with good demand and prices strong. Receipts 3805 hhds ; exports 1299 hhds.

The following table shows the range of prices from September 1st, 1876, to May 1st, 1877:

MOLASSES.

SEPTEMBER—Continues dull and prices nominal, with a stock of about 300 bbls. We are without data of receipts; exports 1195 bbls.

OCTOBER—No stock remaining of old molasses. The first lot of new was received on the 5th and sold at $1 per gallon. Second lot on the 10th sold on private terms. The demand continued good, supplies selling as soon as landed at 82, 81, 80 cents per gallon, prices not being maintained. The month closed with a decline of 4 cents per gallon. Receipts 7797 bbls.; exports 3623 bbls.

NOVEMBER—Opened with a good demand and an advance of 3 cents per gallon for the better qualities; but, although the market remained active, there was, later, a decline of from 3 to 4 cents, notably on good qualities, the prices for lower grades keeping comparatively firm. On the 15th and 18th prices on better grades again advanced 2 cents. The receipts becoming large buyers held back, and prices becoming irregular the month closed with a decline of fully 2 cents per gallon. Receipts 68,168 bbls.; exports 28,379 bbls.

DECEMBER—Steady market; lower grades neglected; good grades scarce and in demand. Prices went down 3 cents per gallon, buyers not caring to move; later the market became active with an advance of 3 cents per gallon. Holders not offering, prices again advanced 2 cents, but fell 1 cent during the current week. The month closed with good demand, and prices for lower grades regular, but better grades scarce at steady prices Receipts 84,640 bbls.; exports 61,912 bbls.

JANUARY, 1877—The demand during the month was moderate with a scarcity of good grades, which were in good demad at firm prices; while the lower grades were neglected at prices favoring buyers. The month closed with a more animated market and slight improvement in prices Receipts 30.618 bbls.; exports 49,546 bbls

FEBRUARY—The market opened with a large stock and moderate demand, with prices in favor of buyers. This was followed by an improved demand for all qualities, and a slight advance on the better grades. The month closed with some call for lower grades, there being no choice in market, with prices unchanged. Receipts 24,671 bbls.; exports 17,133 bbls.

MARCH—Market dull, the only call being for the better grades. Receipts, however, all went off at easy prices. Stock diminishing, with better grades scarce, the market became more active at firm prices. Holders advancing checked the movement. The month closed with a small stock, good demand and prices firmer. Receipts 11,265 bbls.; exports 13,419 bbls.

APRIL—Demand active, supplies selling as fast as received at good prices, with a tendency to higher, the month closing with a small stock, active demand and an advance of 2 cents in prices. Receipts 5559 bbls.; exports 6867 bbls.

The following table shows the range of prices from September 1st, 1876, to May 1st, 1877:

RICE.

SEPTEMBER—Opened with a good supply, and large and increasing receipts, and with some demand at unchanged prices; choice grades scarce, the month closing with a good demand, and holders not anxious to sell at previous prices.

OCTOBER—During this month the stock of lower grades was abundant, while prime and choice were scarce, buyers offering less than holders were willing to take; the demand was fair only. the month closing with a good supply and dull market. Prices unchanged.

NOVEMBER—The market continued bare of choice, with good demand for medium grades; the stock in the rough ample, but clean, scarce. The demand during the month was limited, with sight falling off in prices.

DECEMBER—Opened with better demand for rough than clean. The stock being insufficient, prices tended upward. The supplies being small the demand became more active for all grades at firm prices.

JANUARY, 1877—A small stock of clean and light receipts, with demand moderated. Later, however, the market became more active, with an advance of ¼ cent, which was maintained, the month closing with a light stock, small receipts, a moderate demand and unchanged prices.

FEBRUARY—Only a limited demand; receipts during the month were large, but the market and prices remained unchanged, the month closing with a moderate demand at firm but unchanged prices.

MARCH—The market this month continued dull, the sales being confined to job lots at unchanged prices.

APRIL—Receipts during this month were light and the demand only local, the same prices ruling. The month closed, however, with a better feeling, with sellers unwilling to move from their prices, which caused an advance of ¼ cent and a fair demand.

THE ORIGIN OF SUGAR.

Sugar first became known to Europeans in the early part of the twelve century. The companions of Godefroi de Bouillon at the first crusade were the foremost of the French to whom the virtue and quality of the sugar-cane, originally from Asia Minor, was made known. They, however, used it in Syria without a thought of transplanting it to Europe. They discovered it to be a plant suitable only to countries of warm latitudes. Few stocks had been brought to Sicily up to A. D. 1230. It was successfully cultivated in the south of Italy and Spain, in Andalusia and in the province of Granada. It was, indeed, regarded as a plant more of curiosity than of utility or necessity.

For a very long period the sugar-cane was celebrated only in the codes of pharmacy, and the great staple of our South, now so universally regarded as indispensable to the culinary supplies of the meanest household, was administered but as a medecine.

In the Middle Ages, and later, sugar was only dispensed by the ounce at the establishments of pharmacians and apothecaries. During the sixteenth century, however, its use became more general in Europe, although then only applied to the dressing or seasoning of food. As a consequence, large quantities were shipped to the Eastern Continent from Brazil, and from the French and English possessions of the West Indies.

It was this exportation of sugar from the new world to the old which gave rise to the tradition that sugar-cane was of American origin, and that, had it not been for the discovery of America, sugar would have remained unknown in Europe. But such idea was wholly falacious, and, indeed, false, the truth being that sugar-cane was originally from the old continent, and was first transplanted to the new after it had been cultivated in Italy and Spain, that is to say, in the beginning of the sixteenth century. But it is equally true that its culture in America has been more successful than in the old world.

During 1745 Europe consumed over 250 million pounds of sugar imported from the French, Spanish and British colonies of America. It was then brought in the raw state, and of inferior grades, as is done to-day, and was manufactured into white loaf sugar by the then celebrated refineries of Amsterdam, Hamburg and Dresden. In the beginning of the eighteenth century other refineries were established in France—at Rouen, Orleans, etc. But the progress of this industry in that country was slow. In the first years of the century the whole consumption of the product had reached but about forty millions pounds. At about this time came the discovery of the value of the beet for sugar production. It was demonstrated as a practicable industry as early as 1747, but its practical pursuit only became seriously an industrial element in 1796 or near the close of the century. The cost of its manufacture was found to be so high that it could not, as a commodity in the trade marts, sustain itself against the competitive prices of cane sugar. The consequence was that during about ten years its manufacture ceased altogether. Its resumption arose in the war between England and France which ensued, the continental blockade causing an inordinate advance in the prices of the colonial sugars, so that the manufacture from the beet became much in vogue from beets cultivated around Paris.

This industry, after having experienced intervals of trial and prostration alternately with prosperity and progress, is being successfully pursued by means of new appliances, which are the results of discoveries now rapidly leading to almost absolute perfection in the construction of steam machineries.

The consumption of sugar in its various qualities and varieties, has reached to all classes of society throughout the civilized world. It has become a universal and indispensable article of food, a seasoning, so to call it, of inestimate value to rich and poor, and old and young alike; a commodity at once of luxury and need, the most hygienic in its effects upon health, and most necessary in every home. Indeed, a scarcity of sugar is, at all times, a calamitous incident in domestic circles the world over, which can find no adequate estimate or expression in figures or statistics; while, as an element of commerce, its importance is hardly of less magnitude, although the profits and losses attending its commercial changes are more easily calculated.

SUGAR CANE AND ITS FERTILIZERS.

It is a prevailing impression that sugar is on the eve of gran 'er developments than any other industry. Both in the culture of the cane and the manufacture of the staple. sc ence is taking up with a steady hand the work of improvement, and the value of Louisiana's chief industry will, in the near future, not increase only, but multiply. Much attention is bestowed on the fields, and important elements are at work at once to increase production, simplify methods and improve its qualities. In respect to its past both neglect and incapacity have been signal. Lands have been exhausted, in some cases, owing to gross inattention to the simple rules of prudence and economy; while in others the intelligence of proprietors has seemed at fault. Natural laws regulating production are the same ; but the elements appropriated to production differ in relation and kind. In every variety its treatment in fertilizing is to be according to its characteristics, always with a view to the restitution of exhausted lands. The nature of the cane and the mode of its culture make it, perhaps, the most exhaustive plant known. In Louisiana, once planted, it remains in the ground from three to four years, furnishing from two to three successive cr ps; often the old stubles are rooted up, and the same land replanted in cane. A contribution so vital exacted from the soil, tends greatly to impoverish it; yet this has long been an error in practice, and what is worse, has been followed by planting in lands so impoverished, the short-jointed and hard, woody stubble It is this that has caused the present deterioriation in cane. In addition to all, and to cap the climax of folly and indiscretion, we are spending large sums in experiments, with costly and unsuitable mineral fertilizers, incomplete as to their constituent matters, and sold under false representation. When these are used on land preserving a moderate proportion of humus, the stimulating properties they contain seem to produce an appearance of fertility, while, in reality, they cause decomposiiton. They produce an absorption, by the plant, of more organic substance than the ground can afford. This course, if continued will necessarily lead to extreme impoverishment of our lands and cause further deterioration in the quality of cane. It is a well established fact that fatigued or exhausted lands. compelled into forced production, lose the faculty to digest through the loss of organic properties, which are the necessary vehicle of mineral substance. There, hence, remain only such measures as will restore a reasona ble proportion of humus.

If these premises are correct our present system of cultivation must be changed for one in which fertilization shall do its rightful work of restoring impoverished ground, instead of precipatating it in.o barrenness and waste. We, hence, venture upon the suggestion of such changes as we consider practicable and necessary for the double purpose of stopping deterioration in the cane and restoring fertility to the land.

1st. Fertilizers of either exclusively mineral or exclusively organic substances should be wholly proscribed, and one prepared, constituted in right proportions of both, of the best quality as to its ingredients, well mixed and judiciously used.

2nd. All compost should be kept under shelter. The following composition for cane lands we confidently recommend:

Prepare your shelter of the required dimensions and place, first, a layer of chopped bagasse, which cover with a layer of stable manure, then a layer of cotton seed or cotton seed meal, to be followed by a layer of grasses and leaves of every kind; sprinkle every second layer with ashes, and continue repeating till the pile is about two feet and a half to three feet high; then saturate the whole well with weak lime water. Commence again to place layer upon layer, in the same order as before, until you have a pile from five to six feet high; then saturate again with weak lime water, as in the first instance. This process should be renewed and continued until the pile shall contain the quantity necessary for the land. After two months it will be fit for use; add, then, about 150 pounds of phosphate of lime (bone dust) to every ton, as nearly as can be computed; mix the whole well together, and haul. In its distribution use from three to four tons to the acre, according to the condition of the land. This fertilizer will restore to the soil the substances absorbed by the crop.

3d. There should be set aside for seed the tops of the cane; also a judicious choice of plant cane grown in virgin soils, or those not fatigued by cultivation. These should be planted in well prepared lands.

Should any of our planters have a mind to test, by actual experiment, the value of the fertilizer we so confidently recommend, we should be pleased to receive a statement of its results, as well for the benefit of our patrons as the advancement of the great industry in which we are all interested.

CENTRAL FACTORIES.

The elements which constitute the prosperity of a country do not consist barely in capital and labor. These, to be sure, are primary consistents and place limits to the amount of its production. But the real test lies in the extent and fertility of its soil, and in the industry and capacity of its people. A prosperity which is not merely apparent must be the economical result of a judicious application of these elements. Industry expended without a wise discretion, and without management that will denote capacity in the operator, will fail in bringing a real prosperity and enduring wealth. Whatever product is brought into the market, the bearing it has upon the question of prosperity depends on a profit to the producer, for he cannot go on producing without the ability to make it bring more than it cost. The difference, in all trades and industries, between cost and market value, is exactly the test of a prosperous business, and the extent of that difference the test of capacity in the producer—to produce the utmost as to quantity, the best as to quality, and the cheapest as to cost, being the object in view.

In respect to our home industries, production may be divided into three classes: Agriculture; Manufacture; Agriculture and Manufacture. The sugar interest in Louisiana belongs to the last. The other two are of broader and more general application, and not immediately within the scope of this article. We may say, however, as to agriculture, that it is comparatively easy when in virgin soil; when it has normally the required properties for production. But when long cultivation has produced exhaustion, then the resources of art and the capacity of the producer are brought into request, that it may be renovated and its lost properties restored.

This restoration is not impossible—Europe and all old countries show unquestionable proof of such fact. When rendered necessary the real test afforded of capacity in the agriculturist is arrived at. Hence, the first class, agriculture, comprehends not only mere tillage, but the ability which restores lost soil. It belongs to the sphere of sciences, and the highest intellectual faculties are brought by it into profitable requisition.

Formerly in Louisiana the manufacture of sugar waited only on the cultivation of the cane. When there was rich soil, of good yield, the old-fashioned modes of manufacture gave astisfactory profits. No thought was given to future contingencies; to the improvement of the land; to the need of more effective modes of extracting the juice; to requiring more perfect means to manufacture; nor to the inferior quality of the product.

The time has come, however, when all this is changed. The reports indicate how much we have fallen back in results. Yet we have not been inactive; we have improved our cultivation, our machineries and manufacture; we have put up larger mills, steam trains, vacuum pans, centrifugals, etc. This we have been constrained to do by our discovery of inferior yield; of an increase in the expenses of both cultivation and manufacture, coupled with diminished products; by the necessity of producing more within a given time, and of better qualities.

Would it not have been better, then, had we borrowed wisdom and profited by the examples of Europe and the colonies by adopting central factories, with all their improved and powerful means of action? Better to have applied to establishing such system the large sums of money expended during the last twelve years in our private sugar houses for relieving our agricultural necessities? In order to show how little it can be doubted, let us consider briefly the advantages which would have resulted therefrom to both cultivator and manufacturer. Under our system the cultivator is obliged to hire, at extra prices, for three months, a large extra force for grinding, during which time he cannot give any attention to his field; he thus loses all the advantages incident to well prepared lands, and often loses stubbles and seed also; whereas by the central factory system, he would have been able to give his daily attention to his field, employing only his regular force, having it so distributed as not to leave any part of the field work undone at any time. In our State, especially, where so much money has been expended, such vast labor applied, so much intelligence brought into requisition, and energy shown by our planters, the obstacles they have overcome afford the best evidence of the grand results which would have been attained by the early adoption of the central factory system.

Notwithstanding the slow progress made since the war in our sugar industry, which has led, as one of its effects, to our losing the confidence of capitalists, we believe there is yet time for the adoption of this important change, and we would suggest its immediate consideration, with a view not only to individual interests, but to the welfare of Louisiana—which, indeed, are one question, leaving only a difference as to the incentive actuating those whom it concerns.

All the reports of commissioners, although different in the measure of their appreciation, are favorable to the system; all agree respecting the prosperity of the regions where central factories have been established. They recognize the fact that where planters had fallen into stagnation, were prostrate and in despair, they have, by means of the system, revived, been restored again to prosperity and influence, with energies re-awakened and confidence renewed. What a proprietor, individually, could not accomplish for himself was always realized fully by the association of capital and the combination of labor, covering his interest with their protection and, by the unity of ends, facilitating his efforts. When shall we have a Central Factory in Louisiana?

M. S. BRINGIER'S APPARATUS FOR THE EXHAUSTION OF BAGASSE.

We have elsewhere referred to the fact that the culture of cane and manufacture of sugar in Louisiana are in a transition state, so to speak, awaiting measures for their preservation as a paying industry. Apropos of such suggestion our attention has been attracted to a pamphlet of Mr. A. De La Cornilliere on the "Culture of Sugar Cane and Sugar Manufacture in Louisiana," and treating incidentily of the improvement of Mr. Bringier. We would be pleased to consider more elaborately the important facts and suggestions of Mr. De La Cornilliere than is possible at this late hour. But we have ourselves some personal knowledge of the admirable fitness of the apparatus in question. The extraordinary benefits to result from its universal use are attested in various ways. The ability and standing of its inventor are testimony to its value; the attested results of his experiments afford, however, the most direct guarantees In the clear and able treatise of Mr. De La Cornilliere is presented a detail of its advantages, as well as of the condition of culture and manufacture in our State, showing how necessary the treatment of bagasses by Mr. Bringier's, or some like process, has become. On this point Mr. De La Cornilliere, page 6, says:

"The apparatus constructed last year under the management and by the directions of Mr. M. S. Bringier seems to fulfil all the necessary requirements. Simple in execution and easily managed it makes the bagasse yield 40 pr. ct. or 24 pounds re juice than is furnished by the passage of the cane through the mill alone. It is a well known fact, that the cane after several pressures, even as many as eight or ten, still yields juice, and that a complete exhaustion can only be obtained by dissolving the saccharine substances enclosed in the cellular tissues."

It is easy to conceive the prodigious change which the universal use of Mr. Bringier's improvement would bring to the wealth and prosperity of that great industry in Louisiana,—and with a view to strengthen the effect presented for contemplation by the above extract, we subjoin the testimony Mr. De La Cornilliere furnishes on his personal experiments, page 7:

"Having been authorized, during the last season, to make such experiments with Mr. Bringier's apparatus, as would prove the truthfulness of the assertions made by the inventor, I am convinced that he has under estimated the yield by fixing it at 25 pr. ct. as, instead of this gain, I found 33 pr. ct. The following is a table of the quantity and density obtained hour by hour, by means of the apparatus, as well as the density and the corresponding quantity obtained from the mill furnishing the bagasse."

Mr. De La Cornilliere elsewhere further says, page 6:

"This year he has succeeded in extracting a surplus of 33 p.,ct. and as the apparatus will be constructed hereafter (the cane to undergo four pressures and four steepings) the yield will show a further increase of 7 pr. ct."

The startling fact, so well attested, that 40 per cent. of the sugar products of Louisiana, through all her great past, secured in the culture, have been lost through the inadequacy of the machinery employed in manufacture; that nearly one-half of the product has been cast away from countless thousands fields of cane, extending back through so many years, indeed, generations, is certainly calculated to arouse the interest, not only of sugar planters, but of society at large in all its classes and conditions, in the question of sugar production for the future, not here only, but everywhere.

We regret the impossibility of our further present comment on the important subject of Mr. Bringier's improvement.

MASON'S AND RUSSELL'S SATURATORS.

Some two or three years ago the Honorable Mr. Russell, of Demarara, in a series of experiments, fully demonstrated the simplicity of extraction, as well as the value of the residue of Saccharine that remained in the Begasse after the most powerful expression, exerted by the 1st Mill. Completely exploding the arguments advanced against such a course, viz: That nothing remained of value; that the small amount that might be extracted would be so full of impurities that it would be worthless; and that the begasse would be so torn and damaged as to be worthless for fuel. But since success has crowned his efforts, the demand for Saturators of the "Russell" make have been so brisk in the West Indies and British Guiana's, that the manufacturers have difficulty in supplying the demand It being now evident that no plantation is complete without one. Some five years ago the Mason Apparatus was placed on the Beka Plantation, but from want of means, etc., it ran but a short time, but long enough to demonstrate that 20 per cent. could be obtained by its manipulations. In 1875 it was erected on the "La Freniere," Plantation, and in connection with it a Mill of peculiar construction. The experiments having been published in Journals and other publications interested in the sugar culture caused some little comment in the zone where Mr. Russell's experiments had, in a measure, established the system, in consequence of the salient points not found in Mr. Russell's.

This determined some gentlemen who were acquainted with his Saturator to visit Louisiana so that they might be satisfied as to the fact of the novelties in the Mason Machine. On the 22d of December, 1876, one of these gentlemen, whose proficiency in the art of sugar making, skill, and general information concerning the various practical machines in successful use, including the "Russell" apparatus, accompanied by two well known gentlemen of our community, came to the "La Freniere," and after an introduction, approaching the machine, the following conversation took place:

"Now Colonel what do you think of the elephant?"

"Well it looks much like the Russell."

"That, I expect, is the case, but do you not notice some different features?"

"Yes, as I get nearer to it; you have a wire belt on it, that is different."

"That is one of its principal features, without it the begasse could not be retained in its position, whilst the steam is directly administered to it."

"I do not understand you, Mr. Russell has but the lower belt, the steam and the water is administered and does not disturb the begasse."

"That, I do not doubt, but when I open the door, you will see that I deliver the steam direct into the begasse, and that the wire belt prevents the begasse from scattering, also that the manipulating rollers in the dividing partitions would also prevent its egress, so that the wire belt is a necessity."

I then opened the door, the successive puffs of steam indicating each passage of the follower in its task. The Colonel's astonishment finding vent as follows:

"Well! that seems perfection, the steam's impinging force permeates the moving stream. But the steam, how many times does it strike the begasse, where are the rollers, and why the separate divisions?"

"The steam is the exhaust from the Mill engine, in its passage, water, when deemed necessary, falls from a rose and is borne along, and from the force of its (the steam's) ejection is forced into the begasse in the twelve different compartments. The passage requiring two minutes; in that two minutes some 150 discharges are received, well softening the rind and fibre, so that its exhaustion by mill is all but perfect. The rollers in partitions press on the wire belt in a manner kneading and softening the begasse, also tending to retain the steam in each place, which, rises against the light metal top, condenses and falls in the begasse. In some cases being sufficient saturation without the water."

"Well! Well! this is certainly as much superior to Mr. Russell's as Mr. Russell's is to the open carrier mentioned by Wray,"

By this time another gent of the party joined us and we proceeded to the Mill.

"Why' what kind of a mill do you call this? and where is your driving power?"

" This is a mill gotten up by me for this purpose. The lower roller is 50 per cent. larger than the upper roller, allowing the housing to be thrown forward toward the incoming begasse without interfering with feed of begasse, and bringing the contact or pressure to take place 3 inches forward and $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch below the crown of lower roller, so that the juice can not escape by openings of begasse and allowing the juice a greater time to fall from roller. The small engine ten inches diameter by sixteen inches stroke, being ample as you see, to more than accomplish the duty assigned to it; taste the begasse and judge for yourselves?"

The begasse was deemed as highly satisfactory.

"Well I am utterly astonished. Why the Mill to Russell Machine is similar to first Mill, three rollers and requires as large an engine, boilers, etc., and into that mill we dare not put such trashy begasse as this you are using. It would break down and smash up housings, gearings and shafts. I do not see the necessity of such work; the cane is souring from the frost, why do they not weigh a certain amount of cane, carefully ascertain the per centage of juice obtained. Then test the saturator, arrive at the difference of yield, and give the credit to the saturator that it makes; then release the strain from first mill, and not run the risk of losing a great portion of the crop by this reckless course. I see the obstacles thrown in your way and appreciate your situation. They may throw you back twelve months or so, but keep up your spirits, you have the most perfect method and from its simplicity it is bound to succeed, planters will sooner or later see the necessity of exhausting the begasse, and this plan cannot be beaten. The Russell Machine costs fifty to sixty thousand dollars, what is the value of this?"

"The cost of this, complete, is from six to ten thousand dollars. I have a change to make in this then it will be complete I have warned these gents of their rashness, now it is their own lookout, I have no control. We weighed 20,000 lbs cane; first mill gave 62 per cent. of juice at 9½ B. Saturators mill 20 per cent. 7½ B. Then again 30,000 lbs of cane; first mill gave 64 per cent. of juice at 9½ B. Saturator and Mill 24 per cent, 7½ B. These are good yields, I see no reason why they should not be accepted as a fair result. Let them deliver the begasse without breaking and ensure the security of the crop by relieving the first mill of this reckless strain, and all will go well." As we were leaving the machine we turned to look where the begasse fell from first mill on to carrier for saturator. "Is that poor old man put to straighten the begasse; we put two of our most active men for that purpose? What have you here?"

"That is an evaporator."

"But you don't claim the lower part with the discs. That's the Weitzel or Gadsden, and a good evaporator it is."

"Why no, but I claim the cowl, or cover, also the mode of delivery of the air for evaporation and their regulations. Also the mode of exit for the evaporations."

"Yes! Yes! I see, and I am satisfied that it is the most complete, the simplest, least expensive and quickest evaporator known. I am more than pleased with what I have seen, have a little more patience, and you will succeed in spite of the hindrances and difficulties thrown in your way."

Thus ended, to me, a very pleasant interview with one who was ably and thoroughly conversant with the various improvements, now so eagerly pursued by the most intelligent population of the sugar zone or belt of this continent and the adjacent Islands. In conclusion it is sufficient to say that the expected smash up duly took place. The arms of the spur wheel became fractured near the Hub, Iron Knees were bolted on to strengthen them.

Then the arms gave way near the segiments. Again iron knees were put to strengthen. Then where the knees met, near the centre of the arms, gave way, a new spider had to be cast. During this waste of time the cane sourod and a loss of near two hundred hogsheads was the result A sad lesson for all interested, produced by disregarding the most simple of all mechanical rules that can possibly be laid down, viz: In forcing an unnecessary strain where it was not required, it being superfluous in the premises as they existed.

A. W. J MASON.

EXPERIMENTS IN FERTILIZERS FOR CANE LANDS.

Much interest has attached to the recent experiments in Fertilization of Mr. Daniel Thompson and Mr. Thos. M. Cage on their respective plantations in the Parishes of St. Mary and Terrebonne. We watch attentively all measures for the promotion of improvement in fertilizing. Whatever results attend experiments it is the sure way to progress. Faith in any improvement which is not gathered from a practical application of its principles to use, is neither definite nor secure. In the field of sugar production, both as to culture and manufacture, there is enormous scope for the exercise of capacity and diligence if maximums are to be attained in quantity and quality. Much has been done, and at great expense, in the pursuit of supposed benefits, especially in the line of manufacture, without results commensurate with either the outlay or the industry bestowed. We are hence thankful for every test supplied, or demonstration afforded, of the real utility which any discovery or invention may possess. We wish our capable and progressive planters would apply themselves more generally to the work of utility, and not let theory get too much the lead of fact.

Mr. Thompson, of Bayou Teche, by his experiments, fairly sustains our suggestions elsewhere, that fertilizers, to be effective, must combine both chemical and organic matters. His plan is to divide his field into plots of one acre each; one field of eleven plots being applied to plant cane, and another of seven plots to RATTOONS; his object being to discover the best fertilizer for each. With every desire only to applaud these efforts, we yet are constrained to see that a more legitimate result would have been reached had Messrs. Thompson and Cage "obtained" their summaries instead of estimating them as "obtainable." It is not legitimate to substitute polariscopes, and the head work incident to their use, for the work of the hands, as we see it. In the tables furnished, "Densty" Polarisation," "Per cent of Saccharine" and Total weight of sugar obtainable," are head work or estimates, while by the leigitimate process of manufacture, actual results should have been obtained. There are startling conclusions reached, perhaps, which are impaired from being estimates; thus Mr. Thompson ascertains that plot 10, with no fertilizer applied, and hence without cost, furnishes as "obtainable," 50 per cent more sugar than plot four, on which the most expensive fertilizer of all he compounded was used. Here is the comparison. Plot 4, Weight of Cane, 50,450 pounds; Gallons of Juice, 3,532; Weight of Sugar Obtainable, 2,213 pounds; Cost of Fertilizer, $38,65. Plot 10, Weight of Cane, 44,920 pounds; Gallons Juice, 3,175; Weight of Sugar obtainable, 3,357 pounds, no cost. The per cent of Saccharine contained in the juice from plot

4. is but 66,43, while that from plot 10 is estimated to be 80 per cent. It is a remarkable result that embracing the entire field of eleven plots, No. 10, without fertilization, produces the minimum weight of cane with the maximum of production, and is exceeded in the yield, rated as "obtainable," by four only of the other plots, thus:

No. 10, 3,357 pounds sugar; No. 9, 3,395 pounds; No. 8. 3,497 pounds; No. 5, 3,393 pounds, and No. 3, 3,406 pounds. In the same order we give the cost of Fertilizers. Plot 9 cost $9,40 cts.; No. 8, $31.93 cts.; No. 5, $21,53 cts.; No. 3, $24,23 cts. The ground employed was old soil which had been planted in cane in 1872 and 1873, in 1874 in corn, and in 1875 it was put in pea vines which were cut close for hay, thus demonstrating, by the supposed yield on Plot No. 10, that the fertilizers are not wanted where the land has been fertilized with peas. The loss to the planter in employing the fertilizers on Plot 4, may be shown by contrasting its estimated product with that of Plot 10, giving the following summary:

Plot 4. 50,450 lbs. cane, giving 45,400 lbs. juice would produce, say 12 per cent. sugar and molasses,—5,448 lbs: (mass cuite.)

Sugar, 3,269 lbs. at 8 cts	$261,52
Molasses, 2,179 lbs. at 4 cts	87,16
	$348,68
Less cost of Fertil zers	38,65
		$310,03

Plot 10, 44,920 lbs. cane, giving 40,428 pounds juice would produce, say 14.7 per cent sugar and molases.—4,943 lbs: (mass cuite.)

Sugar, 3,566 lbs at 8 cts	$285,28
Molasses, 2,377 lbs at 4 cts	95,08
		$380,36
Showing the loss from fertilizing at		$70,33

While submitting these figures as not fully satisfactory in their results on the field of Eleven Plots, we are constrained to present in our analysis of the smaller area, applied to rattoons, still more urgent dissent. Mr. Thompson has fallen into great inadvertance in compiling his table; as shown briefly by the following extracts from Plots 1 and 5.

Plot 1, 33,380 lbs. Cane giving 12,450 lbs juice, or 37 lbs. of juice per 100 lbs. of cane.

Plot 5, 30,350 lbs. cane giving 18,957 lbs. juice, or 62 lbs. of juice per 100 lbs. of cane;—thus showing 10 per cent. less cane, and over 50 per cent. more juice from the latter. These figures denote such glaring inattention as to deprive the entire table of essential value. Plots of the same field, of but seven acres. of like previous condition, could not deviate into results so discrepant. No imaginable variation in the qualities of the cane, as the fruit of fertilization, could so tax credulity. It follows that the whole work of experiment, as to rattoons, must be rejected, whether such errors be ascribed to an imperfect polariscope, or inattention to its proper use, or, to causes apart rom the instrument or its application.

The results given by Mr. Cage in his experiments upon a field of eight acres, divided in as many Plots, do not differ, excepting in the absence of such startling discrepancies as we have designated, from those declared by Mr. Thompson. There is the same substitution of estimated, for actual results, which, as we view the subject, defeats in a great measure the grand object of experiment, there is less exactness in detail, as by taking his cane in cart-loads, and not by weight; there is the same method observed in the formulas adopted through which, it seems to us, nothing is, or can be, conclusively established. These investigations, however, have attracted universal attention which is, perhaps, our most considerable gain. That the industry and energy of the gentlemen in question will bring into activity every resource calculated to render experiments more perfect, and results more reliable, we do not permit ourselves to doubt. We shall therefore await new developments from better perfected effort, and more completed methods, with a curiosity common to all who are concerned in the advancement of our sugar interests.

THE "BODLEYS'" DISTRIBUTING MACHINE.

These gentlemen have recently perfected, with the assistance of some of our planters, a machine for distributing cotton seed meal, and other fertilizers; on the stubble or under the plant cane. We have examined it and have no hesitancy in recommending this as a labor-saving machine, and one that will give entire satisfaction. It is simple and durable, will last for years, and has no cog-wheels to get out of order.

Messrs. Bodley are so convinced of its completeness, that they propose to pay all expenses going and coming, and refund the purchase money, if the machine does not do the work which they claim for it.

It is so arranged that any quantity from hundreds to thousands of pounds can be distributed regularly, either on both sides or on top of the rows; can be shut off while turning round, so that none of the fertilizer is wasted, and can be used while the wind is blowing, without danger of any loss. One man with two mules and one of these machines, can do the work of fifteen men, and save the price of the machine in what is wasted by irregularity in distributing by hand.

The axle is so arranged that the wheel can be set to any width required, and the wheels are of the requisite height to prevent any cane being injured by contact with the machine.

This old and reliable house, (established in 1832) Messrs. Bodley Brothers 64 Common street, New Orleans, La., supply their customers with wagons, carts, fertilizers, machines, etc., etc., direct from their own manufactory, save all intermediate charges, and thus benefit their patrons in the most substantial manner.

Their trade is one of the utmost importance to the Southern country, and this firm possesses the necessary means to supply our agriculturalists with the very best materials, and on the most advantageous terms.

Their specialties of trade combine strength, convenience, lightness of draught and durability of workmanship. Their articles are all guaranteed, and consequently they offer nothing but first-class goods. They have made a life-long study of the wants of the sugar planter, in the line of carts and wagons; and as one member of the firm resides in this State, the house is better enabled, by its constant communication with the planters, to adapt, these manufactures to their wants.

Messrs. Bodley are prepared to manufacture to order any agricultural machinery required by planters.

THE WHIRLWIND CANE JUICE BLEACHER.

From reports it appears that this apparatus continues to justify the awards it received at the late Southern States Exposition, 1876, of the First Premium and Diploma for the best method and machine for clarifying cane juice.

But, notwithstanding its acknowledged superiority and its success, we are sorry to say that the apparatus has not been, by far, so extensively adopted as we had anticipated. This, we are informed, is chiefly owing to pecuniary embarrassment and the consequent inability of the manufacturers to supply the demand, which otherwise appears to have been very good. We are happy to announce, however, that the owner of the patent, Mr. J. M. Lescale, of Paincourtville, La., has just concluded arrangements which will enable him, henceforward, to satisfy any demand for the apparatus. Consequently, it may not be amiss to lay before our readers a few observations on this little piece of sugar-house machinery.

It is generally agreed that, from the great difficulty experienced in bringing an adequate supply of sulphurous gas into the juice bleaching machine, it becomes necessary to resort to artificial means to obtain the required result. With this view, a steam jet has been adapted to quite a number of sulphur machines, but with little advantage. In some cases the steam jet is made to blow into the juice a very copious supply of gas, it is true, but, owing probably to the presence of steam, this usually generates in the juice a very high degree of acidity, which proved greatly injurious.

At other times the steam jet is made to create a vacuum inside the bleaching machine, and, as in the first case, there is no difficulty in passing rapidly through the machine any desired amount of gas. But, in this latter case, it seems that the steam jet, creating a vacuum, causes such an expansion and rarefaction of the elastic gas, that the juice fails to get satisfactorily impregnated with it. Hence a defective bleaching, notwithstanding the large amount of sulphur consumed.

The Whirlwind Bleacher seems wonderfully contrived to obviate these defects. Indeed, its revolving spiral wings produce likewise a powerful suction, and consequently a rarefaction of gas: but this takes place only beneath the wings, while between the upper side of the wings and the partitions above there is such a compression of gas that the fine spray of juice passing through it cannot fail to get saturated.

Meanwhile, the proper regulation of air in the combustion of sulphur introduces into the decolorized juice a very mild degree of acidity, which entirely passes off during the evaporation.

That such must substantially be the working of the Whirlwind Bleacher will be realized by intelligent planters upon mere inspection of the apparatus. But while the experience of the last three years fully establishes the superiority of the Whirlwind as a bleacher, its efficacy has been brought to its best light in the treatment of juice from damaged cane.

We have learned with pleasure that the whirlwind is getting into favor not only in this country but abroad also, and that arrangements are being made to introduce it into such far distant countries as Europe, South America, and even the Sandwich Islands.

The serious deficiency in the crop of Cane Sugar for 1876, estimated for all the producing countries at about 200,000 tons less than the yield of 1875, resulted in the decreased importation of 70,519 tons at the ports of the United States in 1876, as compared with the importation of 1875. This very considerable decline in the supply carried with it a higher range of prices, the average of values for the past year being nearly half a cent ℔ ℔ above the average for 1875, and this was in turn accompanied by a diminished consumption. During the first months of the year under review, the deficiency in the Cane Sugar Crop caused but little uneasiness in the consuming countries, as the large increase in the European Beet Sugar yield for 1875-76, say 171,738 tons in excess of the previous season, nearly offset the decline in the Cane Sugar crop; but later on, the rapid and large shrinkage in the estimates for the Beet crop of 1876-77 imparted an extraordinary stimulus both to the European and United States demand, and the greater part of the advance noted in prices on this side the water occurred during the last six months of the year. It will be seen by referring to the preceding statistics that the imports of foreign sugar into the United States (exclusive of the States on the Pacific) for the year ending December 31, 1876, were 592,153 tons, against receipts in 1885 of 662,672 tons, a decrease of 70,519 tons or 10.64 ℔ cent., and that the consumption of sugar of foreign origin in 1876 (deducting exports of Refined as well as Raw) was 561,369 tons, against a consumption in 1875 of 621, 852 tons, being a decrease in the consumption of 1876 of 60,483 tons, or 9.72 ℔ cent. The deliveries then for 1876, including that taken by refiners and after manipulation shipped to foreign countries, exceeded the total receipts of the year by 13,517 tons, leaving the stock at all the ports 1st inst. 25,277 tons, against a stock January 1, 1876, of 46,814 tons, a decrease of 21,537 tons, or 46.05 ℔ cent.

The following statement exhibits the consumption of the country for the past twenty-six years :

Owing to the diminished Molasses yield in 1876, of Cuba, and most of the other West India Islands, the receipts of Molasses at the ports of the United States show a falling off as compared with the receipts of 1875, and, consequently, the quantity of Molasses taken for refining into Sugar in 1876 is less than that consumed in 1875. Refiners brought their operations to a close at an earlier period of the season than usual for lack of supplies. The business, however, has upon the whole been profitable, the product selling freely, and at satisfactory prices, those ruling during the last four months of the year being about the highest of the season. We estimate the quantity of Molasses taken for refining from the five ports, viz: Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore at 210,000 hhds., yielding about 3½ lb sugar to the gallon, and giving a total result of 43,600 tons sugar.

The data relative to the crop of Maple Sugar is very imperfect, as the bulk of the crop gathered is consumed upon the farm; the estimates take a wide range, and are but a little better than guess-work, varying all the way from 12 000 to 15,000 tons; we take an intermediate figure, and place the product of the Maple tree in 1876 at 13,000 tons.

The Beet Root Sugar industry makes slow progress, and is confined chiefly to California; sanguine expectations are indulged, however, and a brilliant future is predicted for this enterprise. There has been a little Sugar made from the Sorgo cane, but, like the Maple Sugar crop, this little is consumed by the planters. This cane is prized most, and cultivated more especially for its syrup properties, especially in those outlying districts removed from the facilities of procuring foreign or domestic cane molasses.

The Louisiana crop of 1875-76 made an advanced step over the yield of the previous season. Mr. L. Bouchereau, of New Orleans, in his valuable and laborious compilation places the yield of that State for the last crop year at 144,146 hhds., against 116,867 hhds. seasons of 1874-75. The prospect for the present Sugar harvest is still more encouraging, the best authorities estimating the yield for the present season, with ordinary favorable weather influences, at 160,000@170,000 hhds. Comparatively but little of this Sugar finds its way to the Atlantic Ports, the bulk of it being consumed in the Valley of the Mississippi. Nevertheless, any considerable increase in the crop will have an indirect bearing on the consumption of Sugar of foreign origin, diminishing the demand at the Atlantic Ports for the Raw and Refined article.

The consumption of Sugar in the States on the Pacific made some little advance in 1876 over that of the previous year. We are without the official figures, but a close estimate shows that the consumption of Raw Sugar in the Pacific States for 1876 was about 28,300 tons.

The following is an extract from the Circular of Mr. F. A. Wheeler:

San Francisco, December 30, 1876.

The following are the importations of Sugar during the past year, a large proportion of which were of low grades for Refiners' use:

Hawaiian Islands	lb...	20,588,645
Manila		29,754,884
China		9,133,195
Central America		469,471
Mexico		365,033
Calcutta		423,856
Batavia		2,795,430
New York (Refined)		5,647,000
Total Imports	lb...	69,177,514
Available stock, January 1, 1876		5,402,822
Total	lb...	74,580,336

We are unable to correctly give the year's consumption; it is, however, estimated at 65,000,000 lbs. against 63 000,000 in 1875.

Since the 9th of September the products of the Hawaiian Islands have been admitted free of duty under a treaty of reciprocity, and their entire crop (at present estimated at about 25,000,000 lbs) will hereafter come to the United States ports on the Pacific Coast—chiefly to this. British Colombia has taken annually about 1,500,000 lbs of these sugars, mostly by direct importation, although some have been shipped in bond from this part. The duty in British Colombia is 1 cent ₱ lb, and 25 ₱ cent ad valorem in addition on all grades, being equal to about 2½ cents ₱ lb average. They are now entirely cut off from this, their chief source of supply, and their wants are not large enough to warrant the opening of a direct trade with any of the producing countries; this, therefore, is the only market to which they can look. Hence Central America and Peruvian Sugars, to the extent of the requirements of British Colombia, will doubtless sell in bond to advantage. The grades mostly desired are, say about two-thirds equal to Nos. 16@18 Dutch, Standard, otherwise classed as high grade Grocers' Sugars, and say one-third about equal Nos. 13@14 Dutch, a good medium.

At present, low grade sugars from Central and South American ports, containing an excess of molasses, are not regarded with favor—our refiners already having a surplus of syrups, several shipments of which having been recently made to Hamburg and other European ports.

With this review of the various sources of supply, the following may be accepted as a very close approximation to the consumption of Raw Sugar in the United States for the year ending December 31, 1876:

Cane Sugar consumed in the United States on the Atlantic	tons...	638,369
In the States and Territories on the Pacific		28,300

Of Maple Sugar		13,000

Total consumption in 1875		773,002
Decrease in 1876	tons..	47,733

Or 6.17 par cent.

We now turn more particularly to the movements in the article at this port during the past year, and, if we institute a comparison with the business at the other ports, the figures will show that we have reason to be satisfied wiih that share of the trade that fell to New York, inasmuch as a fraction over 72 ℔ cent. of the whole imports into the United States were received here, against 62¾ ℔ cent. in 1875, and 66 ℔ cent. in 1874.

The receipts in 1876 at Boston, Portland and the other Eastern ports, Philadelphia and Baltimore, were all considerably less than those of 1875, the latter port importing but little more than one-third the quantity in 1876 that was received there in 1875, owing to but one refinery being in operation in that city during the past year. New York, New Orleans, and the other Southern ports, at a whole, made a small advance in 1876 over the previous year's importation.

The foregoing tables show that the receipts of foreign and domestic sugar ot this port in 1876 were 439,199 tons, against receipts in 1875 of 423,273 tons, while the deliveries for consumption (exclusive of exports of refined), and to supply the wants of the neighboring cities, in 1876 were 412,208 tons, against 405,338 tons the previous year, being an increase in the cousumption proper of 6870 tons. or 1.69 ℔ cent. The stock left on the market at the close of he past year varied but little from that left at the close of 1875, being 18,702 tons, December 31, 1876, against 18,646 tons, December 31, 1875.

Notwithstanding the lessened 1876 crop of Cuba, the receipts here last year were larger than in 1875; from Demerara, the receipts here last year were greatly in excess of the imports of 1875, and the same may be said of the receipts from Europe. On the other hand, the receipts for the year under review, as compared with the previous year, show a decrease from Porto Rico. Barbados the French Islands, St. Croix, Brazil, Philippine Islands, and Java, the latter country only sending us about one-fifth the quantity shipped hither in 1975.

The gold value of the imports at this port 1876, as entered at the Custom House, was $45,496,657.

DELIVERIES OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC SUGAR AT NEW YORK FOR THE PAST TWENTY-FOUR YEARS.

In market values, the fluctuations the past year were considerable, especially since June. The average price for the year of the chief consuming kinds were all above the average for 1875, say for Fair to Good Refining Cuba 51 cents higher, Refining grades Porto Rico 52, White Havana 25, Manila 39, Brazil 49, and Melado 45, all ℔ 100 ℔.

Prices touched their lowest points in March, and attained their highest in November and December.

For the importing interest, the business of the past year was, for the most part, of a satisfactory character, more particularly to those who held their stocks over from the earlier months until toward the close of the year.

Refiners, however, on the other hand, claim that the business of '76 was to a great extent barren of compensating results, the high cost of the raw article, and the great competition that exists in this trade, combining to restrict profits to the very narrowest margins, This interest purchased raw sugar largely abroad last year, not only in the primary markets, but also to an unusual extent in Europe. The shipments of Refined Sugar in 1876, as will be noted by our figures, were below those of 1875; the over-sea business was bnt little more than one-half as large as that of 1875, but our Canadian neighbors nearly made good this deficiency by increasing their purchases over one hundred per cent., for owing to the liberal drawback now allowed by our Government, the refiners of the Dominion have been unable to compete with the American product, and consequently have closed their works.

The grinding of the West India crop is scarcely sufficiently advanced to forecast the extent of this season's yield with any considerable degree of accuracy; still some approximation may be arrived at. and we have to that end communicated with the most reliable and conservative authorities. We briefly summarize the information we have obtained as follows:

The chief interest necessarily attaches to Cuba, this prolific island being our principal source of supply; here, the expectations that were indulged in early in the growing season for a large crop, were, to a considerable extent, destroyed by the hurricane and subsequent floods of October last, and it was at one time feared that the present crop would not be larger than the previous one, which was unusually small. But later on a succession of dry and favorable weather restored much of the fallen cane, and this while enabling the planters to commence grinding earlier, has also given them an opportunity to use up the broken and beaten down cane that would otherwise have been lost.

Reports from some of the sugar districts of the Island are still unfavorable, but from the majority of them the accounts are much more hopeful, so that while the crop of '77 will not by any means be as large as was at one time anticipated, it is now generally expected the outturn will be up to a fair average, something in excess of last season's yield, which was about 140,000 tons smaller than that of 1875.

The same hurricane that was experienced at Cuba, devasted the cane fields of Porto Rico to some extent, nevertheless this island promises also an average crop.

The reports from the English West Indies, and, also, from British Guiana, are favorable to the growing crops, which are expected to give good results both as to quality and quantity, the only exception being the Island of Trinidad, where the heavy rains of November, it is feared, will cause a deficiency, but as to its extent no opinion is given.

Martinique and Guadaloupe made a crop last year of about 150,000 hhds., or about 40,000 hhds. less than the previous season. The prospects for the present yield are excellent, the best authorities estimating the outturn for the two islands at 190@200,000 hhds.

The Brazil crop for 1875–76 was about 150,000 tons; or 50,000 tons smaller than the previous one; it is estimated that the crop now coming forward will exceed the last by about 30,000 tons. Earlier in the season it was generally expected that the excess would reach 40@50,000 tons, but the estimates have been steadily shrinking, and are now down to 180.000 tons. The shipments hither this season, however, will be less than the previous one, as a larger proportion of the crop than usual is going forward to Europe.

Proceeding to the more distant cane-growing countries, we find that Java promises an increased crop this season, the Philippine Islands about the same as last year, if anything a little less, and the accounts from Mauritius and Reunion indicate some advance on last year's figures ; the yield for the two Islands for the crop year ending August 1, 1876, was 153,765 tons—the whole of this product, however, finds its way to Europe.

The total deficit of cane sugar for all countries in 1876, as compared with 1875, was about 200,000 tons ; this deficiency, however, was partly compensated by the increase in the Beet Sugar crop in 1875-76, the yield from the root having been in that season about 172,000 tons larger than the previous crop.

After reviewing the crop prospects in the cane-growing countries, there only remains to consider the outlook for the present Beet Root Sugar crop of Continental Europe, and this very important element in the World's sugar production presents a phase of absorbing interest. The yield of this description of sugar for the season 1875-76 was very large, being 1,317,623 tons, against 1,145,885 tons the previous season ; for the present crop, the figures for some time past have been steadily and rapidly shrinking, until now they are down to 965,000 tons, as the extreme, or a lessened yield in round numbers of 350,000 tons, To offset this deficit, the Cane Countries, as a whole, will probably make an increase on last year's production of 200@250,000 tons ; this, however, with largely reduced stocks everywhere, still leaves a very considerable hiatus in the world's supply for the present campaign. The European consumption of all kinds of sugar for the year ending November 1, 1876, is stated at 1,633,065 tons, against 1,527,924 tons of year ending November 1, 1875, and 1,538,302 tons year ending November 1, 1874.

The stock at all ports in Europe, December 1, 1876, was 251,080 tons, against a stock same time previous year of 360,535 tons, and same time 1874, 335,192 tons It will be seen by the foregoing figures that the stock at all the European Ports on the 1st ult., and at the United States Ports on the 1st inst., together, show a deficiency, as compared with same time the previous year, of 105,649 tons. This, with the net deficiency in the present Beet Root crop, after allowing a liberal estimate for the increase in the coming crop of Cane Sugar, makes a total probable deficit in the world's supply for the present campaign, as compared with the last, of 200@250,000.

From a standpoint purely statistical, the prospect is not favorable for cheap Sugar the present year.

The subjoined statement relative to the Sugar crop of 1875 is submitted by an eminent English statistical authority :—

Cuba produces Centrifugal, Muscovado, Clayed, Molasses Sugar, and Melado, in relative quantities, according to the order we have enumerated them. it is probable that, with the exception of the shipments to Spain, nearly all the Sugar shipped from Cuba now goes for Refining. The Sugar from Louisiana, on the other hand, may be said to go, almost entirely, direct into consumption. The bulk of the British Guiana crop now comes in the form of crystallized Centrifugal Sugar, and goes to the consumer, while the product of the remaining British West Indies, and their Dutch and Danish neighbors, goes in great for Refining, account being, however, taken of the grocery Muscovados from Barbados and St. Croix, and the few Cetrifugals from Trinidad and other Islands. The proportion of Clayed to Muscovado exported from Manilla is officially stated to be about as two to one. The French West India Islands are known to produce about sixty-three ℔ cent. of fine Centrifugal Sugar, a large proportion of which is also known to enter refineries. The shipments from Mauritius indicate that considerably more than half the crop goes for direct consumption, whereas, from like indications, it may be concluded that at least five-sixths of the Java shipments are afterwards refined. From Brazil, nearly all is refined.

The short crop of the West India Cane fields in 1876 was even more apparent in the diminished receipts of Molasses at the United States Ports in 1876 than in the lessened importation of Sugar, the falling off in the imports of Sugar last year, as compared with the receipts in 1875, being 10.64 per cent., while the deficiency in the imports of Molasses in 1876, as compared with the previous year, was 21.98 per cent:

This large deficit in receipts necessarily carried with it a large decrease in the consumption and a remarkable feature in this connection in the trade in 1876 was, that notwithstanding the short supply during the year under review, the average prices in 1876 were lower than the average for the two years preceeding.

The deficiency, however, in the supply of Foreign Molasses, was to some extent compensated by a slight increase in the crop of Domestic taken as a whole, in the seasons of 1875-76, but this increase was by no means sufficient to fill the vacuum caused by the diminished West India supply.

A reference to the tables preceeding will show that the total receipts or Foreign Molasses at all Ports of the United States(not including the States on the Pacific, which import very little) were in 1876, 37,246,394 gallons, against receipts in 1875 of 47,744,514 gallons, a decrease of 10,498.120 gallons, and that the consumption of Foreign in 1876 was quite close up to the imports, being 36, 459,504 gallons, against a consumption in 1875 of 46,418,734 gallons, being a decrease of 9,959,230 gallons, or 21 02 per cent.

If we now refer to the figures showing the consumption of all kinds of Cane Molasses, Foreign and Domestic, we find a better result, the deliveries for 1876 being 48,819,504 gallons, against 58,608,734 gallons in 1875, a decrease of 9,729,230 gallons or 16 72 per cent.

Consequently upon the short supply of Foreign Molasses, particularly of grades suitable for refining into Sugar, the quantity taken for this purpose last year was less than that consumed in this way in 1875.

A close estimate makes the deliveries of Foreign Molasses to refiners in 1876 at the five Ports, Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, 210,000 hhds. Refining operations were brought to a close at an earlier period than usual for the want of material, and it is probable that 15@20,000 hhds. more would have been profitably worked up had this quantity been available in the several markets.

The exports were smaller in 1876 than the previous year, though, during a portion of the season, there was considerable movements in Sugar-House Syrups, &c., for shipment to Europe. About the usual quantity was absorbed by Grocers, while Distillers bought very little, confining thier purchases chiefly into the lower grades of Sugar-House Molasses.

With the exception of New York and one of the Minor ports, New London, which two ports made a slight increase on their importations in 1876 over 1875, all the other ports received less in 1876 than for the previous year, Baltimore notably falling off largely from local impediments, which will probably be removed the current year.

The consumption of Raw Sugar in 1876, omitting Sugar made from Molasses, was 701669 tons; add to this the consumption of Foreign and Domestic Cane Molasses, say 238,000 tons, gives a total United States consumption of the Cane products of 939,669 tons, exclusive of the large consumption of Sorgo and Maple Syrups, relative to which we have no reliable data. These figures though not so large as we have recorded in some previous years, are still of sufficient magnitude to reinforce very strong y the assertion that the people of this country are by no means indifferent to sweets,

At this writing, the prospects of a larger supply of West India Molasses for the present year is favorable, though it is probable that the increase will not be so large as was confidently expected two or three monts ago, owing to the steadily diminishing estimates that are now coming forward from Cuba.

The Louisiana crop of the present season, now nearly completed, promises to be something larger than was the yield of 1875-76. The New Orleans Price Current makes the receipts there to the 23d inst. 191,262 bbls., against receipts of 182,483 bbls same time last year. Mr. L. Bouchereau, in his valuable annual compilation relative to the Sugar, Molasses and Rice Crops of that State, places the yield of Molasses for the season of 1875-76 at 10,870,546 gallons. This always popular sweet is almost wholly consumed by the Grocery Trade, and only the better description of Foreign Molasses enter into competition with it, notwithstanding the Louisiana product commands much higher prices than the best Foreign.

We turn now more particularly to the movements in this article at this Port, and in reviewing the figures, we find that the business in it presents the same characteristics that were prominent in the Sugar and Coffee movement, which we have previously noticed, viz: that while the consumption or the ports, as a whole, show a large decrease, New York, of the principal Ports, alone, not only maintains the position she held in 1875, but made last year an advance step, and nearly reached the magnitude of the trade we enjoyed in 1872.

Thus, of the whole imports in the United States in 1876, 34 per cent, was received here, against 25 13-16 per cent. in 1875, 30 per cent. in 1874, 31 26-100 per cent. in 1873, and 35 per cent. in 1872.

The direct receipts of Foreign at this Port in 1876 were 11,661,288 gallons, against direct receipts in 1875 of 12,331,488 gallons, an increase of 329,800 gallons, or 2.60 per cent. while the total receipts of Foreign and Domestic in 1876 were 16,365,440 gallons, against 16,012,584 gallons in 1875, an increase of 352,856 gallons, or 2-20 per cent.

Referring now to the deliveries, we find that those of Foreign descriptions show an increase in 1876 over those of 1875 of 3.11 per cent. and of Foreign and Domestic together an increase of 7-65 per cent.

Notwithstanding the short crop of Cuba last year, the receipts of this description at this Port were much larger than those of 1875. Trinidad Island and the French Islands also increased their shipments hither, but from Porto Rico, Barbados, Demerara, St. Croix, and all the lesser Islands, with the exception of St. Kitts, there was a falling off of receipts in 1876 as compared with 1875.

The gold value at the ports of shipment of the Foreign Molasses received here in 1876 was $2,573,334 against $2,804,991 in 1875.

The average of prices for the year under review in this market show a decline, as compared with the average for 1875, on Prime to Choice New Orleans of about 11 cents per gallon, on Porto Rico 1¼, and on Refining grades of Cuba Muscavado 2¾, while on Barbados there was but a fractional decline

New Orleans, as always, touched the highest points during the early receipts of the new crop in November and was lowest in March, April and May, prices undergoing no change during these months. Porto Rico was lowest in June and July, and highest in August and September. Refining Cuba was lowest in March (though the October values differed but little from the March ruling) and highest in August and September, prices, however, touched points in November nearly as high. Barbados was lowest in March and highest in December.

The business in Foreign Molasses was, upon the whole not so barren of profit in 1876 as for the previous year, for though prices were lower here during the year under review they were also lower for a considerable portion of the season in the primary markets. Refiners were thus enabled to supply their wants last year at something easier rates, and from July until the close of operations this interest realized an active demand for their products, both Sugar and Syrups, and generally at satisfactory prices.

The following figures show

GENERAL REMARKS.

In conclusion it is proper for me to state, that inasmuch as my design, originally, was to furnish statistics, not only as to the quantity of sugar manufactured for market, but as to the whole crop that was made. In registering the crop of each plantation, I have put down the quantity reserved for home consumption as well, so that my tables indicate the ACTUAL CROP without respect to the use to which any portion of it was applied.

In registering the rice crop, I have taken especial pains to exclude all that was grown the previous year, (1875) of which a large quantity still remained in stacks at the gathering of the crops of 1876. It will be observed that the rice crop for this last year was the largest ever before raised in the State.

In registering the crops of the plantations which boiled their juice into syrup and shipped elsewhere to be ganulated, I have allowed five (5) barrels of syrup per hogshead, that being a fair average.

There has been no change of any note in the methods of evaporating the cane juice; but I have to note an increase in the number of steam trains and Vacuum Pans, and Open Pans. The advantages of the vacuum being more favorably understood, there can be no doubt of their continued increase.

There were 104,944 acres of cane ground last season, which yielded, on an average, 1817 pounds of sugar and 114 gallons molasses per acre.

From the preceding Recapitulation Table, it will be seen that there were 1040 Sugar-Houses in operation in 1876-77; of which 786 used Steam and 254 Horse-Power; 781 have ordinary kettles, 129 Steam Batteries or Open Pans, and 60 the Vacuum Pans. This shows an increase of 58 Sugar-Houses in 76-77; 32 of which used Steam and 26 Horse-Power.

The 60 Sugar-Houses, (the Refineries in the City not included,) using the Vacuum, produced 31,804 Hhds., or 40,768,140 lbs of clarified sugar, and 1,876,436 gallons of molasses; while the 980 Sugar-Houses using the other modes of evaporating cane juice, produced 137,527 Hhds or 149,904,430 lbs of brown sugar, and 10,147,672 gallons molasses.

With these remarks, I respectfully submit my work, and hope it will be to some extent, satisfactory.

THE WHIRLWIND CANE JUICE BLEACHER,

Has received the highest Award at the Louisiana State Exposition, 1876, for the best method and best Machine for Clarifying Cane Juice, and is generally acknowledged far superior to other apparatuses in use for the same purpose.

Based on Chemical and Scientific Principles. Has had unprecedented success. The following are some of its claims to the public favor;

It consumes less sulphur, bleaches better, defecates and settles the Juice Quicker, introduces into it less acidity, and though very simple, is more complete in its details than any other apparatus heretofore in use.

Parties who have used it speak highly of it, and declare it superior to anything of the kind ever used before. Sugar Planters! It pays to use it!
